Notes to Appendix 5

999[1] Sources: (1) A mimeographed list provided by Professor M. Janowitz, University of Chicago, dated 1968. (2) The collection of theses lodged in the Social Science Research Building at the University of Chicago. (3) Faris (1967), which has a list of doctoral theses up to 1935. (4) Files of the Regenstein Library, University of Chicago. (5) Computer search, Dialog File 35, Ph.D theses in sociology 1900-1920.

Not all sources concur. Where any differences occur these are noted, details from the original theses or the most likely version are recorded in the listing. Various other commentators refer to Chicago PhDs, but where these are not in any of the above source lists they are not included. For example, Mullins (1973, pp. 54-57) lists Chicago Ph.Ds who he included as symbolic interactionists, on this list is William Troyer (1942), but no other reference to this thesis could be located.

- [2] This is the title on the computer printout, it does not appear on Janowitz's list, nor in Faris (1967) nor was it located in the Social Science Research Building. On the Regenstein Library file the title was 'The Church and Young Men'.
- [3] These theses only appear on the computer printout and in none of the other sources. It is possible that these were Henderson's students. Henderson was made head of the Department of Ecclesiastical Sociology in 1904, later (1913) Practical Sociology. This still seemed to be under the general rubric of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at the time, see the Official Publications of the University of Chicago, although subsequent classifications of the theses may have detached them from the sociology output. Alternatively, they may just have been lost. Henderson died in 1914 and no further mention was made of Practical Sociology in the section of the Official Publications relating to the Sociology Department.
- [4] This is missing from Janowitz's list, is entitled 'The Origins of Leadership' on the Regenstein list. A book by the author with this latter title was published by the University of Chicago Press in 1909.
- [5] Janowitz's list, Faris (1967) and the computer printout have this reference. However, the computer printout also lists 1915, 'The Japanese Invasion: A Study in the Psychology of Inter-Racial Contacts'. The Regenstein list has no reference to either title. A book entitled 'The Japanese Invasion' by Steiner with an introduction by Park was published by A. C. McClung and Co., in 1917. Raushenbush (1979) noted that Steiner was a graduate from Washington who wrote a thesis on the Japanese on the Pacific Coast in 1913.
- [6] This is not in any source except the computer printout. In 1916 a book with the same title was published by the University of Chicago Press, sponsored by the Committee on Publications in the Physical Sciences.
- [7] The only reference for this is on the computer printout.
- [8] The subtitle is missing from the Regenstein catalogue
- [9] The title in the Regenstein catalogue is 'The Press and Politics in Japan'. A book with this title plus a subtitle: 'A Study of the Relation between the Newspaper and the Political Development of Modern Japan' was published in the Sociological Series of the University of Chicago Press in 1921.
- [10] Not in the Regenstein file
- [11] These theses are missing from Janowitz's list and Faris (1967) but are included in the Regenstein file.
